The painting is a vertical composition. On the right side, a large, gnarled tree with thick, dark brown bark and green leaves dominates the space. Its branches extend towards the top and left. In the foreground, several lotus flowers in various stages of bloom are scattered across the lower half. Some are fully open, showing pink petals and red centers, while others are buds or seed pods. The seed pods are green with yellow dots. Large, round green lily pads float on the water. In the background, a small, dark boat with two figures is visible on the left. The overall style is painterly with visible brushstrokes. The text 'CELIA EBERLE' is centered in the middle of the image.
